ROOSEVELT PLEASSED WITH RESIGNATION

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Mayor James J. Walker's resignation as chief executive of America's largest city came as a complete surprise and a distinct relief to Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, friends of the Governor revealed today. It was expected Governor Roosevelt would issue a formal statement after he had studied the statement issued by Walker in announcing his resignation. Friends of the Governor indicated he would vigorously deny the Mayor's claim that he had not received a fair trial. It is expected Governor Roosevelt will point out he opened the door for the calling of every witness at the public hearing before him who testified against Walker in the Hofstadter Legislative Committee investigation. The Mayor's resignation was a relief to the Governor because it automatically eliminates any further hearing and will permit him to start his 8,000 mile campaign swing to the far west, September 12, as originally planned.

The committee was in adjournment today awaiting a reply from Judge Gawthrop, who is touring the British Isles. His acceptance of the office will necessitate his resignation from the Superior Court bench. Senator William Rial, Westmoreland County, chairman of the committee, said. Judge Gawthrop lost the nomination for another term on the bench at the last primary and his term will expire next January 1st.

PENNSYLVANIA PEACH CROP IN FINE CONDITION

Fruit Rivals That of Georgia and Best Will Soon
Be Picked

DROUGHT HELPED THEM

HARRISBURG, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Georgia hasn't a thing on Pennsylvania this year for peaches.

And, strangely enough, the credit for the stellar 1932 crop goes to drought conditions that have parched field crops, ruined lawns and dried up wells.

According to the State Agriculture Department, the dry season, with its excess of sunshine, has not only given the peach an excellent flavor and high sugar content, but has imparted an abnormally bright color.

The bureau reports that many of the earlier varieties have been picked already. But the choicest specimens, such as Elberta and Hale, will be moving from the fruit belt in the southern districts the first two weeks in September. Shipments from the northern tier will be correspondingly later.

The best quality of Pennsylvania fruit may now be had at reasonable prices for canning, the department advised.

Several Streets Were In Darkness Last Evening

Philadelphia Electric Company failed to get all of the street lights repaired and last night sections of the first and second wards were in darkness.

The street lights from Mill street to Dorrance street and also the lights on the Beaver street bridge were out of service. Traveling on these thoroughfares was more or less hazardous.

The electric company is penalized for each hour that a street light does not burn and this is deducted from the bill by the borough authorities. Police were making a check-up of the lights last night.

A CLEVER DOG

(By "The Stroller")

"Raider," the police dog of "Nick" Stallone, who made a raid on the hearts of the Spring Stars' baseball players, and became their mascot, is believed to be one of the most intelligent dogs in Bristol.

"Raider" does many errands about the Stallone house, and makes himself generally useful from day to day. If his master is upstairs the dog will carry money or other articles in his mouth to Mrs. Stallone on the first floor. Each afternoon when the newsboy appears across the lots from the Stallone home at Jefferson avenue and Spring street, the dog is off post-haste, and returns with the newspaper. That is his daily task, and he knows it.

The dog makes an excellent baseball player, and is usually in all the games on the nearby lot. He catches the "flies" that come his way, and if a ball is lost he does his share of the hunting, and is usually the one to find it.

Walker Quits While
Under Fire As Mayor

By James L. Kilgallen
(N. Y. Staff Correspondent)

NEM YORK, Sept. 2.—(INS)—James J. ("Jimmy") Walker, one of America's most colorful political figures, and a world-wide celebrity, is today a private citizen. He resigned last night as Mayor of New York City in the midst of a great civil upheaval.

His resignation came as a startling climax to a brilliant public career which has kept him in the limelight in New York state for the past twenty-three years. He is now 51.

He resigned because, he said, he felt he was not being given a fair "trial" before Gov. Roosevelt on charges of malfeasance in office made by Samuel Seabury, chief counsel of the Hofstadter Legislative Committee, which conducted a long and exhaustive investigation of Tammany Hall and the Walker administration.

In ringing terms Walker announced he would submit his case "to the supreme authority—the people themselves."

Walker's resignation was made public on the eve of his scheduled appearance this afternoon in Albany before Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt on removal charges filed by Seabury.

By the resignation, which was "effective immediately," Joseph V. McKee, president of the Board of Aldermen, automatically became Mayor of New York.

WOMAN BLAMES HUSBAND FOR HER FALL OUT WINDOW

Mrs. Raymond Austin, 22,
Drops About 20 Feet
To the Ground

NOT SERIOUSLY INJURED

Police Try to Locate Austin
To Get His Story of The Affair

A young woman was either thrown, jumped or fell from a second story window yesterday afternoon and despite the fact she landed on a concrete pavement below, does not appear to be seriously injured.

Mrs. Raymond Austin, 22, 112 Pond street, is the injured person and according to the police she says her husband knocked her out of the window following a quarrel. She was picked up in the rear of the house where she and her husband resided.

Men sitting in a barber shop on the first floor of the premises yesterday afternoon, at about four o'clock, heard a commotion. Eddie Moffo, Penn street, thought something was the matter and running from the shop went to the second floor. He found the Austin door locked but broke it down.

"No one was in the room and I ran to the window and saw her down on the ground," says Moffo.

Police were called and Chief Jones responded.

Moffo, Anthony Flatch and Mike Whyne put Mrs. Austin into the police car and rushed her to Dr. J. Fred Wagner's private hospital. Chief Jones taking Moffo's car immediately went in search of the woman's husband.

VACATION RELAXATION

Men are themselves while on vacation even though their wives vote down their choice of vacation places. The comment of a prominent clergyman that "we are rarely at homey ease in our vacation" is correct only in its application to "common people" who elect to spend their two weeks at an ultra-fashionable resort.

Even the mighty fall from their high-hat existence when they leave dull care behind and don holiday togs. President Hoover is at "homey ease" with a fishing rod in his hand. Speaker Garner is even more so. Secretary Stimson and Senator Borah can lounge in a saddle. Alfred E. Smith can enjoy a vacation in the water and Governor Roosevelt can enjoy one on the water as much as a boy visiting the seashore for the first time. Among the presidential aspirants only Norman Thomas professes to scorn relaxation, but it has been observed that he can get a vacation of pleasure and relaxation out of a day's motor trip.

If there is ever a time when a man is truly himself it is when he is on vacation. There he forgets himself and lets go. Different men desire and require different modes of relaxation and recreation but the result is the same.

Vacations are being devoted more to rest this year than for a number of years. Fewer vacationists are exhausting themselves with auto tours that are too long. Even the ocean voyage is being used more for rest than for going from here to there.

SUN SHINES IN KANSAS

Kansas has at last found farm relief and it didn't come from dirt-farmer politicians or congress. Nor do the Kansas farmers themselves deserve all the credit.

The Federal Reserve Bank has been receiving exceptionally favorable reports from its correspondent banks in Kansas, and from these it estimates that the recent increase in farm prices has placed $400,000,000 in the pockets of the farmers of the tenth district.

What confidence and optimism must have come with this sudden stroke of good fortune, especially since it is not contingent upon loans or gifts or other obligations that will have to be paid back! It must have seemed to the beneficiaries like the dawning of a new era.

It was not all accident. Farm prices soared into the stratum of profits because of reduced acreage and subnormal crops. It was a blessing the farmers could have brought about years ago had they cooperated in keeping production down to consumption. But their friends the politicians told them society owed them a market for all they could produce and they believed it.

Perhaps agriculture has learned its lesson. If it has, it will never again deliberately violate the law of supply and demand, a law which all can obey but none can repeal.

New York averages 91 false alarms a week, exclusive of Tammany investigations.

Why a truth serum when it is only necessary to elect a man to office to find him out?

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

IT was a glib story. But then, Vincent Rowland was a glib personality. Everything about him had a polished ring of insincerity. In my own mind I could not decide whether to believe his explanation or not. Nor could I tell how his account had registered with Thatcher Colt. For the Police Commissioner began a machine-gun fire of cross-examination that took the attorney completely by surprise. He had not suspected Colt's mastery of the deadly art of inquisition.

Had Rowland known anything about scorpions? Had he any fear of Doctor Baldwin? Did he know a man by the name of Ricardo Villafraña?

"Why were you late in starting out last night?"

"Late?"

"Yes! Christine and Guy Everett went to the Lion's Paw. Originally you planned to go with them. You told us that at the Mayfair. Why didn't you all go together?"

"I don't know—"

"Don't quibble. You had that quarrel here. Chung told us that. What were you quarreling about?"

Vincent Rowland shrugged his shoulders.

"I have told you that. I warned her that she was going to get herself in trouble. As a matter of fact," and here the old attorney cleared his throat as if resolved to tell the truth and shame the devil, "she made demands on me for a large loan. I knew it was blackmail, and I resented it as such."

"That makes it look worse!" cried Dougherty.

"I had every motive in the world to kill Lola," agreed Vincent Rowland placidly. "But I didn't do it. I had no motive to kill the others. And I didn't do that, either."

"We are not proceeding as directly as I intended, but we are obtaining facts, nevertheless," observed Thatcher Colt with a faint smile on his tanned face. "There remains the reconstruction of Lola's murder. If we can do that accurately, I think the case can be definitely solved. I mean by that, we shall be able to prove conclusively the guilt of the killer."

Here his eyes traveled slowly from Guy Everett back to Vincent Rowland.

"You two gentlemen," he said, "have acknowledged that circumstances point suspicions at you. Yet you both very properly insist that we complete our case before accusing you."

"Then what is our case?"

"We are all familiar with what happened outwardly last night. The District Attorney reached here last night in company with the police. Although we did not know it, Christine Quires was already dead and suspended from a flag-pole support outside Lola's window. None of us could have known that. Where, meanwhile, was her assassin?"

"Remember, gentlemen, that her assassin was still near the scene, ready to strike again."

"Henry, will you go into that room there, please, and bring me the only framed photograph in the room?" asked Colt.

"And, curiously, a letter had been written warning of that impending stroke."

"The reason for the writing of that letter is one of the main clues in this case. At no time has that ever been out of my mind. The same is true of the killing of the dog and the parrot. If there was no logical reason for those things, if they were caprices of the killer, nevertheless they were important because they betrayed a psychological condition. If we understand that condition, we shall then be that much nearer to the guilty one. The reasons for the deaths of the dog and parrot are simple enough—the murderer was experimenting with the scorpions to be sure they could kill."

"But what reason could there be for the note of warning?"

"It must be found in the twisted brain of the killer. It betokened a motive that was deeper and darker than mere expediency. It meant malice, the desire to inflict suffering, fever, torment, horror—and a vast egotism that is a concomitant of such hatred, an egotism that will despise safety itself. Therefore, I felt from the beginning we were dealing with a crime of revenge."

The doorbell rang. At the sound of it, Thatcher Colt's face lighted up. It was as if all this time he had been playing for time, waiting for the coming of an important messenger.

It was indeed a messenger from Police Headquarters, none other than Captain Israel Henry, the silver-haired guardian of the Commissioner's private suite. The sight of Captain Henry gave me a premonitory thrill. If the papers in the officer's hand were so important that only he could be entrusted with them, Thatcher Colt must indeed have a surprise up his sleeve.

In the gravest silence, Thatcher Colt received the envelope, and broke the seal. Several papers, including two rumpled cablegrams and a photo—more, a telephoto—were found inside. We all had to wait while Thatcher Colt read them through, not once but three times. "Thank you, Henry," he said, at last. The police officer was about to leave when Colt's suddenly lifted glance stayed him. "And now, Henry, will you go into that room there, please, and bring me the only framed photograph in the room—it is on the dresser."

Colt was pointing to the boudoir of Lola Carewe. That picture again—which Colt had returned by messenger—the picture of Basil Boucher! Had M. Dupont sent us more facts about that unhappy young man? And, even so, what possible connection could there be between that mildewed old love affair three thousand miles away and these New Year deaths in New York City? I could not understand Colt's obsession with that photograph; with the whole, manifestly irrelevant matter of Basil Boucher. The young Parisian bank clerk was dead. Dead years ago! Then why? The next moment I reproached myself.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

MAKING MEALTIME A PLEASANT TIME

NOT long ago I visited the Kansas State College nursery school—there are twenty-five small children there this year, some of them not yet two years old, none more than five. Come with me into the dining room. It's very quiet this morning. Let's look around, while we have a chance, and see how these modern nursery dining rooms are furnished. Green draperies at the windows—gay posters on the walls—and low tables, eight of them, all set for lunch. There's a tall pitcher of milk in the center of each table. Forks, spoons, and napkins are placed just so. Mrs. Kell, director of the school, says the children set the tables. They carry the silver in small baskets, and when they put it on the table they are very careful to touch forks and spoons by the handles only. The chairs are drawn up to the tables. But where are the children?

Resting, says Mrs. Kell. This way—across the hall—there they are, all twenty-five of them, resting on low canvas cots. Some of them seem to be asleep, a few are kicking their heels in the air—but they're all peaceful and quiet. Well—this seems too good to be true. Perhaps it's only a calm before the storm.

But no—if we stay a little longer, and watch the children flock quietly into the dining room—we'll see how orderly they are.

Each child pours his own glass of milk from the big pitcher in the center of the table. And then, how that milk does disappear! Any child can have as many lunches as he likes. An extra dessert means an extra first course. And it is surprising, according to Mrs. Kell, how often a child eats his lunch, including dessert, and then goes back for a second round.

But what's the matter with this little girl? She doesn't seem to be getting on very well today. She was sent to nursery school because her mother simply could not make her eat. The child has just come through a long siege of illness, and it is very important that she learn to eat. At home, she refuses practically all the food that is offered to her.

Mrs. Kell is sitting at this little girl's table. See how careful she is to give the child only small servings. Not more than two or three teaspoons of any one food. And Mrs. Kell is eating very slowly to keep the child company. She pretends not to notice her indifference to food.

The little girl is reacting quite normally to such good treatment. She's trying to show off. Now she's on the verge of tears. But Mrs. Kell is talking with a boy on her other side, about trains that go round a track, and about the animals at the circus—pleasant things to talk about. Really, if the conversation at the table is entertaining enough, you're bound to forget your troubles and eat a little.

As a matter of fact, the children at this school are encouraged to talk, to think of mealtime as a happy period at which they can express themselves without restraint. Mrs. Kell has four simple rules, that make for contentment at meals: first, twenty-five minutes of rest before meals. Second, very small servings of food until the child has formed the habit of eating all that is served him. Third, patience and no signs of anxiety on the part of the grown-ups at the table. Fourth, pleasant conversation at mealtime, on subjects not connected with food.

FASHIONS OF FRANCE MAKES A CALL FOR GLOVES OF VELVET

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS, Sept. 2—(INS)—The hand that rocks the cradle will be softer than ever this winter, for it will be sheathed in finest velvet.

Hand covering must match the ensemble, just like hats and shoes. This is the latest edict from the French style-makers. And the best way to accomplish this is to take a piece of the material to one's glove-maker and have them turned out there. Ordinary gloves of kid or suede, no matter how beautiful they are, can never make such a perfect match.

Some of the new velvet gloves are nothing short of masterpieces so soft and fine they can be rolled into a little ball. Some are made of mere strips of velvet with an embroidery stitch connecting them; others have fine pin-tucks and demure little ruffles. Copies of velvet gloves of the Renaissance period are very interesting.

Other evening gloves come in real point de Venise, as delicate and fragile as a spider's web. They are gauntlet shaped, with most delicate fingers and little cuffs in hands.

Others come in sheer silk tulle with a long cuff forming a big balloon, the end of which is fastened round the arm below the elbow with a narrow elastic band.

Pigskin will be very popular for sports wear, the thick supple pecary being gathered into a sunburst of pin-tucks on the back of the hand. Another type has gauntlets trimmed with "insertions" of untarnished white metal.

FASHION FAVORS A SPIRAL EFFECT FOR TRIMMINGS IN FUR

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—All the little furry animals are zig-zagging around smart autumn and winter wear. Meaning that spiral effects are very much to the fore for fur trimmings which will be winding themselves about Milady's throat and sleeves in a totally different manner.

A back yoke on a long coat outlined with fur to stimulate a collar has its beginning from the shoulder in front. Another rather high collar stands away from the neck and to the side, instead of wrapping warmly around it, but the designer assures one it is none too chilly for a cold winter day.

Full-length ermine for evening is worked in zig-zag fashion across the lower skirt and is made into wraps or coats. An original twisting of pointed fox of two or more skins is gracefully draped and attached so that it slips over the head as a scarf and is much simpler to handle than the old choker.

A new one-shoulder fur cape continues the spiral effect. One made of three fine silver foxes is deep enough on one side to cover the shoulder and arm almost to the elbow and gradually narrowed to the width of a few inches on the other shoulder.

A little fur bolero with a double puffed elbow-sleeve or a cape is being worn with some of the late autumn and early winter models and there are elaborate fur muffs to match.

Fur coats for sports wear in panther, pony and antelope come lined with wool.

STATE NEWS

HARRISBURG.—The Bureau of Foods and Chemistry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, has announced certain decisions on pure food questions as a result of recommendations made at a recent meeting of consulting chemists.

Use of artificial coloring in cottage or cheddar cheese, even if labeled, has been declared unlawful.

Rabbit meat can not be used in sausages if mixed with beef or pork, but used alone it can be made into sausages and sold under the label "rabbit meat sausage."

Similarly, frankfurters manufactured of a mixture of meat and fish cannot be sold under the new sausage laws. However, if made entirely from fish, they can be sold, if properly labeled.

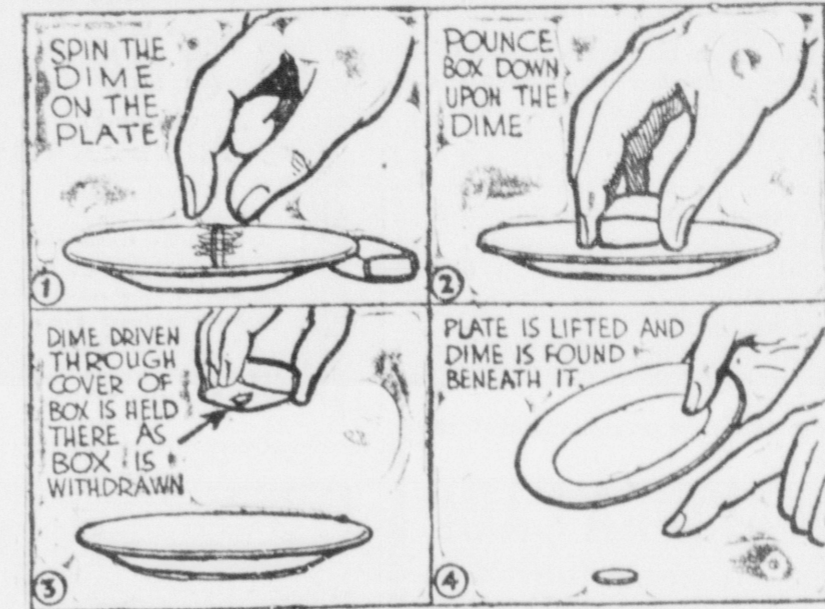

Pure foods officials are now working on satisfactory standards for apple butter so that the use of apple culls, pomice, cores and skins can be prevented.

Cooperative arrangements have been complete with the national distribution association to prevent the shipment of unfilled and diseased pecan nuts into Pennsylvania this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. William Boyd, Beaver street, and their guest, Mrs. Belle Sloan, Philadelphia, with Mr. and Mrs. Russell Crosby and family, Harrison street, spent Sunday at Seaside.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

DIME ON PLATE VANISHES AND IS FOUND UNDER PLATE

Prepare for this trick in the following manner: Lay a plate on a table, hide a dime under the plate and place a penny match box turned upside down beside the plate. Then gather your audience around the table, drop a dime on the plate and announce that you will make the dime disappear. Pick up the dime and spin it on the plate. While it is spinning quickly pick up the match box and pounce it down upon the dime. The dime will disappear when you raise the box, having been driven through the thin cover, where it is held as the box is taken away. With the audience wondering where the dime has gone, the performer lifts the plate and presto! what is believed to be the same dime is found beneath the plate. The reason for turning the match box upside down is that it is easier for the dime to penetrate the top of the box.

American Designers Lead with New Fashions

Home Creations Well Ahead of Paris with Latest Styles for Late Fall and Early Winter. Color and Fabric Stressed.

Milady is going to be very enthusiastic over the new clothes for the coming season. American designers have excelled their foreign competitors, and even themselves, in turning out a lovely line of creations in all models—street, sports and formal—so entrancing that milady will not be able to resist them. Wool leads in the choice of fabrics for street and sports wear and velvet for formal evening. Above are three models chosen by Hollywood notables. At left is Myrna Loy in a smart outfit of Chartreuse wool. It is novel in its vari-colored woven fabric waist band and collar. The smart little hat is of the same material. In center, Jean Harlow wears a gorgeous velvet evening gown. It has a creamy lace bodice and is trimmed with wide bands of silver fox fur. At right is a tweed and pique combination, worn by Madge Evans. The dress shows a short-sleeved tie-around top with pique fashioning the cuffs and vestee, which is finished with a cat-whisker bow. The most fashionable colors this season are all shades of red of rosy tones from light to deep wine shades.

THE VANSANT OAK

Located at "Lone Oak Farm," Middletown Township crossroads, better known as Hellings Corner, is the Vansant Oak, on the farm of Merton Vansant.

The tree, with tall, straight trunk, is believed to be the remainder of a former forest group.

In the branch formation there is found a fine example of natural graft, one branch connecting two other branches.

The age of this tree is judged at four centuries. Although damaged by lightning, the remnant of a forest of long ago has weathered well.

Now, close by its side, pass two macadam roads, the paths from which they eventually grew probably being forest trails when Pennsylvania was but a woodland.

NEW SUMMER BEVERAGES THAT WILL KEEP YOU COOL

NOTHING is so popular as a summer afternoon as a tall, frosty pitcher of punch. Lemon, limes and oranges, iced tea, grape juice and ginger ale are the mainstays of the punch-maker's equipment, but I also recommend a never-ending supply of ice (as if there were such a thing, except at the North Pole!) and a goodly number of over-sized glasses. When these summer beverages are made of fresh fruits, on grapejuice or other bases, they're a fine thing for you.

I won't dwell on the fruit-ades. They have been made since our great grandmothers fixed up porch refreshments for the callers in the 1700's. Here are some new punch formulas:

For an individual glass of Grape-juice Ricky, mix one half glass of grape-juice with the juice of half a lime and two tablespoons of sugar or sirup. Pour on crushed ice. Fill glass with plain or charged water. Or try this, with sugar cookies, or chocolate nut brownies, out under a shady tree.

Two cups grape juice, two cups elder, half a cup of grapefruit juice and a dash of nutmeg. Fill pitcher half full of this beverage and dilute with sparkling spring water.

Then when small berries are ripening on the bushes in the back of your garden, and when market stands overflow with blackberries, raspberries, huckleberries and so on try this Berry Shrub:

To one quart of fresh berries add a little water. Cook berries until tender. Strain and add sugar, pound for pound. Then add one cup of grape juice and the juice of two oranges. Fill beverage glasses one-third full of this liquid—add shaved ice and serve. (That's delicious.)

And let me give a tip to anyone making punch for a large group of people at a Sunday school picnic for instance. It will save you money to use grape juice and ginger ale in the punch. And it will also save you money to use a fruit gelatin dissolved in water in place of part of the fruit juice called for.

And here is the recipe for one of the simplest summer drinks—Grape Juice High Ball. Into tall glasses, half-filled with shaved ice, pour grape juice. Add an equal amount of charged water and garnish with a thin slice of lemon and a sprig of mint. That's so easy even a man can concoct it. It's my own summer standby.

JEFFERSON A. C. WINS FROM GRUNDY MILL IX.

A large crowd saw the Grundy Mill nine go down to defeat at the hands of the Jefferson A. C., 13-1, last night. The "Mules" hit hard, every man getting at least one hit. Ed. Keating, veteran third baseman, saw action for the first time in two months and starred with the stick, getting a double and single. Paul Keating and Joe McKee also had two bingles. Manzo had a triple and single for the mill nine.

Jim Cooper was relieved in the fifth inning by "Lefty" Dittus, who silenced the guns of the "Mules."

Fry went the distance, getting nipped for six hits and struck out eight rival batters.

Saturday the J. A. C. will play the La France nine. Sunday the snappy Doylestown A. C. will be the rivals. Both games will be played on St. Ann's field and will begin about 3 o'clock, sharp.

CROYDON

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dolde entertained relatives from Philadelphia on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Ganther and daughter are spending a week at Wildwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Selis, of Mayfair, are now making their home on Emily avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. William Johnston are renovating their recently purchased property, State Road and Cedar avenue.

Rev. and Mrs. Edward Dowe, of Scranton, is spending a few weeks at the home of Mrs. Dowe's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Turner.

Mrs. Otto Zester is spending a week with Mrs. Zester, Sr., in New York.

Chief Morgan enjoyed the week-end at Townsend's Inlet with friends.

George Scharg and Miss Mae Beck enjoyed the show at the Grand, Monday night.

ALL-CROYDON NINE IS FORMED; OFFICERS NAMED

At a recent meeting of the newly-formed All-Croydon baseball team, William Keene, well known in local athletic circles, was elected president of the club. Other officers were elected and plans for the coming winter and next season were made.

Other officers include: Lou Surrick, secretary-treasurer; "Bill" Keene, coach; Jimmy Jackson, team captain; Lou Serriek, manager, and J. Jensen, booking agent.

Efforts will be made within the next few weeks to find a home for the club, since President Keene indicated that activities will be carried on throughout the winter months. The club plans to take up basketball, he said, and at the same time will hold social functions.

The All-Croydon team which has played a number of games, winning seven out of nine, is made up entirely of Croydon players. Among the losing opponents were: Third Ward, of Bristol; Pleasant Hill, Ambler, Cornwells firemen and Echo Beach.

The team plays all of its games at a field donated for their use by John Hamm. It is located on State Road at Linden avenue.

The real strength of the team was brought out last Sunday when the locals took a double header, the first with Ambler and the second with Pleasant Hill. The first fray was played in the afternoon on the home ground and ended in a 3-2 count for the homesters. Ash was on the mound and permitted the Ambler stick wielders only four scattered bingles.

In a six o'clock twilight fray at Pleasant Hill, "Wis" Miller on the mound took the big team across for a 12-8 tally.

This Sunday the All-Croydon nine will meet the strong Monarch A. C. from Philadelphia in a tilt scheduled for Hamm's field at 2:30 o'clock. Ash will probably be on the mound.

On Monday, Labor Day, the home team will play a double header against Tioga Field Club. Both games will be played on the home grounds, the first scheduled to start at 10:15 a. m., and the second at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

All three of the coming games will test the playing skill of All-Croydon and a large crowd is expected to witness the games.

The new team includes: Ash, p.; Wis Miller, p.; Leo Gleason, ss.; Jimmy Jackson, ss.; Hughes, 2b.; B. Trindle, 1b.; Fender, 3b.; Buck Lewis, c.; White, c.; Davis, c.; Clarence Hamm, Russell Bock, E. Hamm, Johnson, E. Moran, F. Crossley, H. English, B. Piler, C. Bock, and Phipps.

LA FRANCE A. C. SPLITS DOUBLE-HEADER HERE

The LaFrance A. C. split a double-header yesterday. In the afternoon on Sullivan's field, the Third Ward A. C. easily defeated them, 9-1, and at night the "Frances" nosed out Johnny Manera's All-Stars, 6-5.

There was nothing to the Warders' tilt. The downtown lads slugged the ball from the beginning and had no trouble in piling up a large lead while their hurler "Chaney" Della was mowing down the opposition in elegant style. Bills and Vannett led the hitters with two bingles each.

The Manera's game was close from the start and only a fast double-play on the part of the winning club saved the game. In the third frame the Manera's nine had a runner on first when Manager Manera drilled a hit to 1st. Arcollesse fielded the ball and with a rifle throw to Murphy nailed the base-runner at third; a quick throw to second doubled the hitter there.

Tonight the LaFrance team will battle the Shamrocks.

HUNTING LICENSES ARRIVE FOR COUNTY

Hunting licenses have arrived at the office of the county treasurer at Doylestown and the first one was issued Monday to Sheriff Horace Gwiner.

Yesterday the State Game Commission published in the Courier several changes in the game laws.

To date Bucks County has received about 9,000 of the license tags which have a blue background and white figures.

In view of the fact that the hunting season is not yet at hand, it was stated from the office of the County Treasurer that approximately 100 prospective Nimrods made application for their licenses, the first having been issued to Sheriff Horace E. Gwiner, who without doubt will be repaid for the two "bucks" he invested for the license.

As in the case in procuring automobile tags, a number of people who find pleasure in hunting prefer to have low figures on their licenses and this accounts for the early application for them.

As the time for the hunting season approaches the State approaches the applications will become more numerous and by the time the season opens this sport.

It is expected at least 10,000 licenses will have been issued.

To date no women throughout the county have applied for permits to go hunting this fall, but it is probable before the season opens several will.

It was impossible to learn today exactly how many fishing licenses had been issued during the season, but it was learned a large number of the followers of Izaak Walton engaged in this sport.

Newcomers to Walker Cup Play

By HARDIN BURNLEY

MAURICE MCCARTHY
AND BILLY HOWELL

TWO YOUNGSTERS
OF THE U.S. WALKER
CUP TEAM WHO WILL BE PLAYING FOR
THE FIRST TIME
IN THE CUP MATCHES!

©1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Copyright rights reserved.

DESPITE the criticism which followed the selection of the American Walker Cup players—particularly because of the failure to name Johnny Goodman, conqueror of Bobby Jones—recent golf happenings have made the U. S. G. A. selection committee look good.

And despite the general feeling that the American team does not seem to be up to the standard of other years, the American squad—old guard and new—is facing confidently the opening of the matches at Brookline, Mass., today.

Francis Ouimet, reigning national amateur champion, proved that his game is still good recently by trimming a field of crack professionals in the Massachusetts open. Jess Sweetser, veteran Siwonoy star, turned in a brilliant round of 69 at Sleepy Hollow when he and Bobby Jones defeated Billy Burke and Johnny Farrell in an exhibition match. And then there was the brilliant play of youthful Billy Howell in the recent intercollegiate championship. Billy, who is making his first appearance as a member of the Walker Cup team, reached the finals of the intercollegiate tourney and, despite the fact that he lost, clearly demonstrated that his brilliant golf of 1931 was no flash in the pan.

Another young golfing genius who is making his first foray as a Walker Cup player is Maurice McCarthy, Jr., husky Brooklynite. McCarthy several times has knocked at the door in the amateur championship. At Merion in 1930 he reached the quarter-final round and last year at Beverly he reached the semi-final round, losing to Jack Westland the privilege of facing Ouimet in the finals.

There has been much discussion of the possibility of these two "inexperienced youngsters" folding up under the stress of international play, but there is hardly much chance of that. The Old Guard—Ouimet, Sweetser, Johnson and Voigt—heroes of many Walker Cup links battles, will be there to supply a steadying influence.

Well, anyway, it should make a great combination, youth and experience, and this 1932 links battle should prove to be a whopper.
